- 10:30am – 10:40am Morning Break and Networking
- 10:40am – 11:30am Morning Concurrent Sessions
 “Accreditation Panel Discussion” – HLC accreditation has changed significantly since many Oklahoma colleges have last been through the self-study process. Presenters are from Oklahoma institutions that are about to go or have recently been through a self-study and visit. Presenters will discuss their approach to accreditation, organization of their on-campus HLC team, methods of data gathering, differences in the self-study related to the criteria change, and issues that arose before, during, or after the HLC visit. Attendees will have the opportunity to ask the panel questions.
 > Dr. Mark Giese, Northeastern Oklahoma State University
 > Dr. Mary Millikin, Tulsa Community College
 > Dr. Frances Hendrix, Rose State College
 “Using a Database Application to Assess Your Office Strategic Goals and Objectives” – We are often asked how much time was spent on a given task and whether or not hours devoted to complete a project met a specific goal or objective. In other words, did we accomplish what we said we would do in our strategic plans? The purpose of this session is to demonstrate how an automated project tracking system can help link project hours with stated goals and objectives of the Institutional Research office and division goals. An automated project tracking system is one practical and economical solution when forced to manage office activities with limited resources and budget constraints during these difficult economic challenges.

2:30pm – 3:20pm Afternoon Concurrent Sessions

“Microsoft Excel – Pivot Tables and Graphs” – Microsoft Excel offers an inexpensive means for statistical compilation and analysis of data. The presenter will demonstrate how to take data and turn it into something useful by various campus constituencies. Hands-on experience is offered in this session.

- > Cindy Boling, University of Central Oklahoma

“Lifting the Veil” – The presentation will provide a general overview of Cameron University's revitalized institutional effectiveness system with a detailed description of the processes now being used to actively engage administrators, faculty and staff in the goal of improved student learning through improved assessment practices. The university implemented the practice of having the faculty/staff from each program make formal presentations to the respective Dean and representatives from the Institutional Assessment Committee. This review process has resulted in more effective data collection and reporting, increased faculty/staff participation, improved student learning, and a more unified culture of assessment on campus.
